Catching the Mantle should be required reading for anyone who is engaged as a servant-leader in the contemporary Christian Church. Lester Love, Lead Pastor of The City of Love in New Orleans, Louisiana and Bishop of Protocol for the Full Gospel Baptist Church Fellowship International, has examined all of the nuances of serving leaders. He is able to do it from a personal viewpoint and does so with all of the passion of a servant who loves his work and performing it with a “spirit of excellence.”

The approach in this book allows the reader to take inventory of his own anointing and purpose in the Christian Church. He describes the attributes, gifts, and personal challenges that go along with being a servant. His candor and openness about his ministry, as well as his elevation, has been revealed as an open book about himself and those leaders who provided him the impetus to strive toward excellence.

Catching the Mantle will also prove helpful to church leaders, especially pastors, who are concerned about having a spiritual as well as functional perspective about those who serve them and the challenges that go along with someone standing in the proverbial "shadow" of great men.
