What if all you knew about fairy tales was wrong?

Every one hundred years, the fairy tale characters wake up from their Sleeping Death, previously induced by The Grimm Diaries to conceal the truth about fairy tales. The Queen of Sorrow, wrongly known as the Evil Queen, tells the truth about her daughter and who she really is. A scholar girl digs up the origins of the true Cinderella and why she was given such a name. Peter Pan, a rich boy, living in a modern castle by himself, tells the true story of Sleeping Beauty and how he met her. Little Red Riding Hood tells the true story about how she came to earn her cape and why it was red. A mysterious man tells the true origins of the Evil Queen's mirror, who manufactured it, who bought it, and who the voice inside it really is. And finally, a Prince Charming closes the circle and investigates the story about the real Snow White, her mother, and how all of the stories are linked and related to each other. Is it possible that all fairy tales have been historically true stories embedded in lies we call fairy tales?
